

What is the Council?

Ministerial Advisory Council on Disability

Easy Read

About this Easy Read

Department of Communities

This Easy Read was written by the WA
Government Department of Communities.

It is about the Ministerial Advisory Council on Disability.

We call it the Council for short.

We use easy words here to tell you more about

- The Council
- The job of members

There is more information in harder words on our website.

About the Council

The Council is a group who gives advice to the WA Minister for Disability Services.

Council members are

- People with disability
- Family and carers
- and
- People from the disability community

The Council helps the Government hear the voices of people with disability in WA.

Important documents for the Council

A law called the Disability Services Act says the main rules for the Council.

The State Disability Strategy is an important part of what the Council does.

This is a plan with ideas to make life better for people with disability.

The Council has other documents with extra rules.

We will have these extra rules in Easy Read soon.

What Council members must do

These are the jobs of Council members.

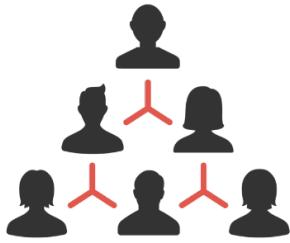

Promise to be honest and fair.

Make sure people with disability get a say in WA Government plans.

Stand up for the rights of people with disability, their families and carers.

Be connected to people from

- The disability community
- Disability organisations
- Government

Make sure advice is correct and up to date.

Follow the rules and laws of the group.

Keep Council information private.

This is also called confidential.

How much time it takes

The Council member job goes for up to 2 years.

Members must go to 6 meetings each year.

Meetings go for 2 and a half hours.

Members do 2 hours work before each meeting to

- Read the papers
- Plan what they want to say

Members also do work in between meetings

- Read emails
- Read papers
- Email advice
- Go to extra meetings

Who helps the Council

The secretariat is a group of workers from the Department of Communities.

The secretariat

- Plans meetings
- Makes papers
- Supports members

What members get

Members get paid $505 per meeting.

We can pay members back for some costs to be part of meetings.

For example if you need a taxi there.

Members can get support for meetings like

- Easy Read
- Support person
- Auslan

Members can get free counselling if they need it.

For more information you can email
Boards_committees@communities.wa.gov.au