Important information for owners of affected land

Under the Building Act 2011 (the Act), a person responsible for building or demolition work must not, without notification and consent of each affected owner, encroach or adversely affect land beyond the boundaries of the works land unless each owner of affected land has consented to the work.

The person responsible for the work (who could be the builder, demolition contractor or the owner of the land on which the work is done) is required to provide you with details of how your land will be affected.

After you receive this form you have 28 days in which to consider what is being proposed. If you are not entirely clear about what is being proposed, you should liaise with the person responsible for the work and request further information. Under section 86 (2A) of the Act the person responsible for work who gives notice or seeks consent may apply to the Magistrate's Court for a court order, if:

- consent is refused - any time after the refusal is given; or
- the consent sought is neither refused nor given and you do not make a request for further information within the 28 day period after this form was given - after that 28 day period has expired; or
- the person responsible for the work provides further information in response to your request - 14 days after further information is given.

Alternatively, the person responsible for the work has the option of changing the design such that it does not affect your land. In such cases there would be no requirement to notify you or get your consent for the purposes of the Act.

You may indicate your response on this form at part 7 and return it to the person responsible for the work. The work affecting your land must not commence without your consent or a court order.

It is suggested that you keep a copy of the signed form indicating your consent or refusal for your records.
