About this Report

The purpose of this report is to provide information about the work carried out by the District Court of Western Australia. A number of different statistics have been included that illustrate different aspects of the civil court process. Care must be taken in interpreting these statistics. It is NOT possible to compare one indicator with another as the methods of counting are not aligned.

Separate counting rules that best illustrate the work of the court are utilised for each statistic. Please read the counting rules on each page to help interpret the data.

Counting Rules:

- (a) These are the number of civil cases lodged in the District Court in Western Australia, broken down by case type.
- (b) The unit of measure is the number of new cases commenced in the court during the reporting period.
- (c) If 'n/a' is present in the % Change column, this indicates that the calculation is 'not appropriate' given that the values of the columns in the table being compared are less than or equal to 10. Comparing values this low is statistically meaningless.
- (d) The large increase in the number of civil (originating summons) cases lodged in 2010/11 is attributed to court fines for ignoring a jury summons or for failing to obey the direction of a jury pool supervisor being transferred from the criminal division where it was recorded as a miscellaneous criminal matter, to the civil division where it was recorded as a civil (originating summons) matter. Simultaneously, the Court processed a backlog of such matters. In October 2011, an amendment to the legislation gave the Sheriff's Office the authority to issue infringements for these matters.

Counting Rules:

- (a) These are the number of civil documents lodged in the District Court in Western Australia, broken down by document type.
- (b) If 'n/a' is present in the % Change column, this indicates that the calculation is 'not appropriate' given that the values of the columns in the table being compared are less than or equal to 10. Comparing values this low is statistically meaningless.

Appendix One--Definitions

The following are definitions of case types and remedy types that are used within the District Court.

Case Types

Matters lodged within the District Court are classified by case type. The following definitions specify the differences between the case types used.

Appeal Criminal Injuries

When a decision has been made to compensate a victim for injuries suffered as a consequence of an offence, and the victim is not satisfied with the decision of the assessor of the amount of compensation allocated, it is then appealed.

Appeals File

A file that has been created in the current court as a result of an appeal to an order or judgement made in a lesser court. If the appellant feels the decision was unjust and wishes to have that matter reviewed, they file an appeal.

Australian Register of Judgements

Refers to the enforcement of judgements that were given at a different court interstate. For the judgement to be enforced in this state, it must first be registered with the court that has the jurisdiction to enforce such a judgement.

Civil (Originating Summons)

Civil proceedings between parties that are not commenced by writ are commenced by originating summons. Originating Summons refers to matter where the facts of the case are agreed, but the Judge must decide in the meaning of a particular law.

Civil Cause (Writ of Summons - Proceeded by Pleadings)

A civil action that has commenced by an issue of a Writ of Summons. These are actions in which damages (monetary compensation) are sought. A writ is the form used for issues of factual disputes to be determined in open court.

Remedy Types

Within each case type, matters lodged within the District Court are also classified by remedy type. The following definitions specify the differences between the remedy types used.

Appeal from Magistrates Court

The Appellant disagrees with the Magistrates decision and had the right to appeal the decision in the District Court.

Appeal from Commercial Tribunal

Appealing the decision from the State Administrative Tribunal (SAT).

Appeal from Criminal Injuries Compensation

Appealing the result of the criminal compensation.

Appeal from Real Estate & Business Agents Superannuation Board

Appealing a decision with Western Australia Electoral Commission (WEAC).

Appeal from Other Jurisdiction

An appeal moved to a different court, not necessarily a higher court.

Bills of Costs

An application to a court to determine the costs to be paid at the completion of an action.

Civil Debt Recovery

A civil action claiming a specified monetary amount.

Legal Profession Act Bills of Cost

An application to a court to determine the costs to be paid at the completion of an action. The bill is itemised and all of the costs that the party feels are owing are listed in the bill for the taxing officer to determine.

Proceeds of Crime

Proceeds of crime are assets that have been obtained unlawfully. Individuals who have unexplained wealth can be court ordered to provide evidence on how they gained their assets. The responsibility of proving the property was lawfully obtained is of the respondent, and unexplained wealth may be confiscated and forfeited to the state.

Proceeds of Crime Act 2002

The act which regulates the tracking, restraining and confiscation of proceeds of crime and also regulates how the funds can be returned to the Australian community to alleviate the effects of crime in Australia.

Workers Compensation Section 93

The section of the Workers Compensation Act that deals with remedies against non-employers. This is for instances where someone other than the employer should be responsible and the employer in this instance was not legally responsible or negligent.

Compensation/Restitution Order (Criminal Court)

The Sentencing Act 1995 allows for the making of a compensation/restitution order in favour of a victim of crime. The person can enforce the order by lodging it at a court as a judgement.

Compromise

Both parties come to a compromise, generally all parties agree to terms and conditions.
